SAN FRANCISCO POLICE FIND NEW SUSPECT IN NORA FULLER CASE.

Carrie Dixon, Jilted Woman, Gives First Information Which Tends to Connect Charles B. Hadley With the Crime-He Has Disappeared-According to Captain Seymour It Was With Utmost Reluctance Dixon Woman Was Induced to Reveal Facts Contained in Statement.

Prancisco, April 26.-After three months of futile and discouraging effort the Police Department has found a clew in the Nora Fuller murder mystery. The latest suspect, and the one on whom circumstances, in the opinion of Chief Witt-man and Captain of Detectives Seymour, seem to point to is Charles B. Hadley, who fourteen years has been employed as an secountant and subscription caphier in the these office of a San Francisco newspa-January 16 Hadley walked out of the Exminer office at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon and disappeared as mysteriously as though earth had swallowed him up. For a days a desultory effort was made to ascertain his whereabouts and the reasons for his sudden withdrawal from the ordinary channels of his life, and then the mat-ter was allowed to rest. Days grew into eeks and weeks to months, and still no weeks and weeks to months, and still ho tidlings came from Hadley. At the time it was whispered that he was in financial arrears with the concern which had em-ployed him, and this fact, coupled with an intimation that there was no desire to prosecute him, was accepted as a reason-able explanation of his sudden disappear-

Woman Continues Search.

There was one person, however, who was not so easily induced to abandon the search for the missing man. This was Olive Skel-iy, sometimes Carrie Dixon, a woman who had represented herself as Hadiey's wife. is, sometimes Carrie Dixon, a woman who had represented herself as Hadley's wife, and with whom he had lived for about tenmonths. To her persistency in trying to locate Hadley was due whatever effort the police made to find trace of him. What her motives were can only be surmised. She herself gives no satisfactory explanation of them, although she is not backward in speaking or the interest she manifests in the missing man. He actions, however, do not correspond with the sentiments she pretends to entertain toward him.

To what she claims was a chance remark of hers made to a detective on a street car about ten days ago is due the fact that the police have singled out Hadley as the probable slayer of Nora Fulier. When Hadley first disappeared Detective Cody worked on the case and met the Dixon woman, who represented that she was Hadley's wife. He saw her on a street car ten days ago, and asked her if she had heard anything of the missing man. She answered in the negative, adding that she became frightened over the Fulier case and dropped the entire matter.

Cody did not press the inquiry, but reported the conversation to Captain Seymour, who at once realized its possible significance and began a personal investigation along the lines suggested by the woman's conversation. As a result, the police are prepared to say that suspicion points strongly to Hadley as the man who decoyed Nora Fulier to the Sutter street house and left her dead body there on or about January II, and give as grounds for such suspicion the following facts:

Hadley Leaves San Francisco. Hadley disappeared from San Francisco in January 16, the day on which the fact has first made public that Nora Fuller was dissing from her home and possibly had sen murdered.

missing from her home and possibly had been murdered.

He quitted the city without making the least preparation for his departure, leaving all his clothes and personal effects in his spartments and a sum of money in the Phelan Bank amounting to $1,500. He has never made the slightest attempt to obtain his belongings or to withdraw the money from the bank since his departure and his whereabouts remain a mystery.

He is said by the Dixon woman to have occasionally worn a false niustache about the house, and when this addition was made to photographs of him, which represent him as being clean shaven, some of the men who met and talked with Bennett positively identified Hadley's picture as a likeness of Bennett or Hawkins. Others found a strong resemblance and only Krone was positive that Bennett and Hadley were not the same men.

Again the Dixon woman states that after Hadley had disappeared she found among his effects some underclothing and an overshirt, which were stained with blood. These shirt, which were stained with blood. These she claims to have burned, but gives no satisfactory explanation for such action.

Tucked away in a closet in the Sutter street house were found two handkerchiefs, both bloodstained and one partiy burned, and in the clothing left by Hadley were two handkerchiefs of exactly the same material as one of those rescued from the drain pipe of the closet. The handkerchiefs are of an ordinary kind that many men might carry.

Theodore Kytka, the handwriting expert of the Police Department, has made a re-port to Captain Seymour stating that the signatures of Hawkins in Umbsen's renting signatures of Hawkins in Umbsen's renting book, the handwriting of the "advertisement" handed into the Chronicle office by Bennett, the chirography of the Examiner advertisement and the specimens of Hadley's handwriting obtained by the police are the product of one hand.

So far as the police are concerned the alleged connection of Hadley with the Fuller murder rests upon the above facts. Captain Seymour will not say that he belleves him guilty of the believes rime, but he believes that the incriminating circumstances are stronger against this latest sus-for eight years and that by no possibility could the accountant disguise himself by the addition of a false mustache so that he would not recognize him. Krone was so positive that the case seemed to fall at once, but there was more encouraging news from some of the others who had met Bennett or Hawkins.

pect than against any other whose name had been mentioned in the case.

"I do not accuse Hadley of murdering Nora Fuller," said Captain Seymour. "It is not my custom to say in advance whether or not I believe a man guilty, but I do think that the facts we have developed tend strongly to connect Hadley with this crime and justify us in using our utmost effects to effect his capture.

According to Captain Seymour, it was with the utmost rejuctance that the Dixon woman was induced to reveal the damaging facts contained in her statement and on which rests the principal basis for suspecting Hadley of the crime. She says that she did everything she could to shield him, but in the same breath claims that she does not and never did care for him.

Like all women of her class, she is a medly of contradictions. About 28 years of age, and of the world worldly, she professes to look upon her late companion merely as a "good thing," who treated her with kindness and whose going caused her no heart pangs. But behind her smiling exterior no one may know what furious flames of jeafousy and rage for her desertion have prompted her to the disclosures which she claims to have made reluctantly.

It was known that she was feverishly anxious for some news of Hadly after list disappearance and sought in many ways to ascertain tidings of him. Then she exhibited a feeling of animosity against him and endeavored in many ways to cast discredit upon him. For awhile she claimed that she was his wife and was assiduous in propagating the news that he was a defaulter for a large amount. Here is what she told a Call reporter of herself and Hadley and the Fuller murder case.

"If you were to pack this room with $20 gold pieces," said Miss Skelly last evening. "I would not tell where Charley Hadley is at this time. Had I known what the police, were driving at I would never have told them anything about him. They deceived me. Detective Cody made me believe that he was trying to catch Hadley for forging a check. I told him that I had burned that he Says Hadley Was Jealous.

"I was never married to Hadley. He had rooms in my house and we were always together. He was of a jealous disposition and threatened to shoot me if I went out with any other man. I did not care a fig for him. He would follow me from place to place and often he would take a carriage and go to the Cliff House and try to get me to go home. If I came home late he would be waiting up for me.

"Charley Hadley is not dead. Whether he is guilty or not, he will never return to this city. Hadley was not his real mame. His name is Start and his mother lives in Chicago.

"Personally, I don't care for this not roffety, but I am sorry for my people. They are too nice to be brought into this case." When Captaln Seymour succeeded in getting a full statement from the Dixon woman he secured photographs of Hadley and had the originals altered by the addition of a mustache and different varieties of hats to conform with the descriptions of Bennett's manner of dress. These were first submitted to F. W. Krone of the Popular Restaurant, who is the only man who knew Bennett personally. Krone twas emphatic in his declaration that Hadley could not be the same man as Bennett. He said that he had known Hadley net.

R. T. Schell, a salesman employed by J. C. Cavanauph, from whom Hawkins purchased the furniture that was put in the Sutter street house, positively identified the photographs of Hadley in a silk hat and with a mustache as the man known as Hawkins.

Ray Zertum, the grocery boy who saw a stranger with Nora Fuller and another Rirl at the store where he works and Nora Fuller alone with the man in Golden Gate Park, identified photographs of Hadley with the added by as the stranger in question.

W. F. Lahanier, who rented the house to Hawkins, was strongly of the opinion that the photographs of Hadley with the addition of a mustache were those of the lessee of the Sutter street house who visted Umbeen's real estate office, but he could not be absolutely positive.

Thomas Tobin, the expressman who delivered the furniture to the house, found a strong resemblance between the photographs and the man who received the goods, but he would not say that they were of the same person.

A. B. Crawford, the clerk in the Chronicle office who received the advertisement from Bennett, was anything but certain of the resemblance between Hadley's photograph and the murderer. He thought that the face from the nose down was similar, but as regarded the upper portion of the face it was his opinion that the two were dissimilar. His fainer to identify Hadley carries with it much significance, as it vitally affects the value of Expert Kytka's opinion. The advertisement in size vou want we lars, regular price 40c to $1, for

SMOKING CHURCH SERVICES. Archdeacon Wilberforce Told Men

> Archdeacon Wilberforce, of Westminister, started the movement during the present week. He invited the men who were fitting up Westminister Abbey for the coronation to spare a part of their dinner hour to religion, gave each man an ounce of tobacco, and told the men to come and smoke and make themselves at home during the service. The men were delighted by the novel proposition, and have been assembling in the cloisters daily to the number of upwards of 190. They join in heartily in the hymns and the Lord's prayer, occasionally taking a drink from their beer cans.

though they invariably remove their caps and pipes during prayers.

The archdeacon keeps the men's attention riveted by interlarding his exhortations with anecdotes of heroism, elc. At the conclusion of the services the archdeacon circulates among the workers, shaking hands with them, and is rewarded by cries of "Thanks."

In the meanwhife the abbey is rigorously closed to the general public. This fact seems to have whetted the appetite of sightseers, who are resorting to all kinds of plans to obtain admission. The Americans are particularly eager.

EDMUND RUFFIN'S LOCKET. Historic Relic Contains Hair of Three Distinguished Ladies.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Neshville, Tenn., April 26.—The story of Edmund Ruffin, the man who fired the first shot of the Civil War, by Will T. Hale, has brought to light another historic relic which bears directly upon Edmund Ruffin's life. It is a gold locket, which belongs to Mrs. Henry H. Cook of Franklin, a direct descendant of the old Virginia family which gave to the world this soldier and patriot. Judge Cook brought the locket to the city with him and exhibited it to a few of his friends and members of the bar. The locket contains a remarkably well-wrought representation of three urn-shaped tombs, surmounted by a weeping willow, all worked out in human hair. The tombs bear respectively these initials. "A. E." (Anna Eaton, "J. R." (Jane Ruffin), and "M. H." (Mary Hayne), and represent the graves of three distinguished sisters of Virginia.

The locket was made in Threadneed's street, London, in 1788.

The hair used in reproducing the tree and tombs was that of Mrs. Ruffin, Mrs. Eaton and Mrs. Hayne.

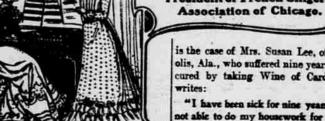

The maiden name of these was Bland. They had two other sisters, Mrs. Richard Randolph and Mrs. Beverly, but when the locket was made they were still living and consequently none of their hair was used in 4t. shot of the Civil War, by Will T. Hale, has

WHILE RESISTING ARREST.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. San Francisco, April 25.-Word was re-eived by W. A. Pinkerton of the Pinkeron's National Detective Agency that O. C.

Hanks, alias Camilla Hanks, alias Charley lones, alias Deaf Charley, was shot in San Antonio, Tex., Wednesday by officer Pink Taylor while resisting arrest. The body was identified by the Pinkerton employes and also by his mother, Mrs. A. L. Cox of Abilene, Tex. She gave his correct name as Abilene, Tex. She gave his correct name as Orland Camille Hanks. Hanks at one time lived in San Francisco, but was never concerned here in a serious affair.

Hanks was as desperate a criminal as ever operated in the United States and was one of a gang of train and bank robbers. George Parker, alias "Butch" Cassidy, alias George Cassidy, alias Ingerfield and Harry Longbaugh, alias "Kid" Longbaugh, alias "Harry Alonza, alias the "Sundance Kid." with Hanks and a number of others were concerned in the robbery of the First National Bank of Winnemucca. Nev., when $2540 was secured by three masked men, who entered the hank, held up the cashier and four other persons. Two of the robbers carried revolvers and the third a Winchester. They compelled the five persons to go into the inner office of the bank while the robbery was committed. Most of the money was in gold cole.

hold-up of the Great Northern express train, near Wagner, Mont., on July 3, 1891, when $5,000 in unsigned bills of the National Bank of Montana and the American National Bank of Helena were sto en. Bills to the amount of between $400 and $500 of the National Bank of Montana were found on the body of Hanks. Other members of the gang are now in Iail, but Longabaugh and Parker are still at large. Hanks, shortly after the last robbery, was pursued by the officers in Nashville, Tenn. He jumped into an ice wagon and drove off at a furious rate of speed. But the ice wagon was too slow for him. He threw the horses down, blocking the road, forced a negro out of a buggy, drove into the country, secured a fresh horse and escaped. Shots were exchanged on both sides. sides.

According to Pinkerton, Hanks was one of the most desperate robbers his agency has had to do with and he expressed satisfaction that an end had at last been put to his career.
